Each competitor in Bingo Racing is associated with one of the columns on a standard flashboard. With 15 columns, there are 15 competitors. As shown above, competitor 1 is associated with balls 1, 16, 31, 46 and 61. Whenever one of these numbers is called, competitor 1 moves forward one position. Once all five of these numbers are called, competitor 1 crosses the finish line. Likewise, competitor 10 is associated with ball calls 10, 25, 40, 55 and 70. Once all these numbers are called, competitor 10 crosses the finish line.

4. Super-Fecta Wager

Video King's Bingo Racing is a line of patented themed games, which use randomly generated numbers associated with race competitors to create the feel of a live event. (Compatible with event-style pull-tabs.) Video King has three themed races now running (with more in store): HorsePower Racing™, based on thorough-bred racing; Go-Go Ball Racing™, a humorous spin on a race of Bingo ball characters; and Longshot™, a spoof on greyhound racing.

True to form, Bingo Racing has simulated race track announcers, (in English, French and Spanish) who help build excitement by "broadcasting" the race as the competitors jockey for position. To add to the excitement, a variety of combination "wagers" in the form of Bingo cards (electronic or paper) can also be played.

Wager Combinations (Pictured At Left):

1. Exacta - The first two finishers in exact order.
2. Quinella - The first two finishers in any order.
3. Tri-Fecta - The first three finishers in exact order.
4. Super-Fecta - The first four finishers in exact order.

And, whenever the game-ending pattern is not achieved, players simply continue daubing until the card is full (a black-out), and a consolation prize can be paid.

Here's another racing tip. Both the Tri-Fecta and Super-Fecta are excellent progressive games, since the number of possible outcomes increases with the number of places involved.

Set up is simple. The racing software integrates with Video King's PC-based blowers, utilizing either Bingo balls or a random number generator. The graphics PC then broadcasts the race to monitors throughout the hall.

No matter the format, Video King's Bingo Racing gives both Bingo hall operators and players the inside track to fun and profitability!
